

What's My Line?

An entertaining interactive keynote or breakout presentation

Overview

Here is a workshop that delivers three of the most important corporate training requirements in one place: motivation, team-building and presentation skills. How can that be? Look at it this way.

If you can learn to relax, just a little, while speaking in front of an audience without worrying about what you have to say; if you can relax, just a little, and rely on those participating with you; if you can be just a little bit more agreeable and contribute towards the goal, doesn't that make you a more valuable member of the team?

There is a way to learn how to become more comfortable in front of an audience, think on your feet, and speak with conviction. This workshop is a fun way to do just that.

The workshop uses a series of exercises from the world of improv, the same type of exercises taught at virtually every theatre school. Because there are no scripts or presentations to memorize, participants can focus on listening, speaking and interacting, instead of the minutiae of a specific presentation.

And as for team-building, you need only consider the first rule of improv, "Yes! And?" Simply stated, it means, "Accept and advance." Because if you don't follow this one rule, the exercise will fail. Guaranteed!

This is a 100% participation workshop; participants will be on their feet in front of the group throughout the session and may not stay in their seats when called upon.

This is a safe environment to learn and practice these skills. As I tell participants at the beginning of the workshop, "If you are going to get anything from this class, you'll have to get out of your seats and leave your ego at the door!"

Ron's critically-acclaimed companion book, "Six Steps To An Organic Presentation" is available in conjunction with this presentation. This book will help the student learn an organic approach to learning and making presentations and is based on Ron's experience as an actor and magician.
